COW SIGNALS TRAINING

Cowsignals is a technique that has been developed to help anyone working around cows to improve how they observe them and their surroundings and then use this information to assess the housing and management from a cow point of view. It sounds simple, but in reality do we properly assimilate these messages as we go about our day to day?

Too often we become blasé about the things we have decided that can't be changed on our farms and we make do with lower than optimal standards of management. Cowsignals helps people to see simple solutions that are often free or very little cost that can be made to buildings and systems to improve the lot of the cow or calf. Many useful assessment techniques are discussed on the day, the style of which is designed to be very interactive.

The Cowsignals workshop starts with some tutorial based discussion followed by a very practical hands-on assessment of a farm and the cows within it. This results in a real tangible action list at the end of the workshop where improvements on the farm begin from that day. Delegates leave with a heightened enthusiasm to go away and really observe their workplace with a 'can do' attitude and a better understanding of how to get the most out of their cows by making them more comfortable.

Lambert, Leonard and May are in the unique position of being able to offer not just direct Cowsignals consultancy on an individual farm, but also we have been given the rights by the creators of Cowsignals to teach other people to use and teach these techniques. Whether you would like to have your own farm assessed, or if you want groups of employees to be trained to observe, or maybe you want your team to be trained to go out and train others – in all these situations we can help.
